

Owing to a shower of rain this morning we did not get out to church. I went this evening however and took Lewis with me. Our minister gave us an interesting and profitable discourse on the fourth Commandment respecting the Sabbath day. I'm thankful that this subject is receiving the attention of the Christian public, more than ever of late. The agitation for more stringent Sabbath laws being apparently quite general.

The Lord has been very gracious to me this day also.

Proceeded in getting in our first crop of hay this evening. It was not in very good order though.

Went down to garnis this afternoon to get the waffers all straightened up. Called on the way at James Walcott's & had dinner. Met my friend Mr. Thie Munkie there unexpectedly. When coming home heard that J. Jackson had met with an accident his boy having had an arm broken by a saw-log rolling over him. The doctor speaks favorably though.
