Gastric Cancer with Acute Onset.

The frequency of an acute onset of gastric cancer is not yet generally appreciated. The writer reports 12 cases in which the diagnosis of gastric cancer was made in from two days to two months after the beginning of symptoms of stomach trouble. He urges exploratory incision in all individuals of middle life who furnish a history of previously good digestion with a sudden and persistent attack of gastric distress, or who complain of a sudden increase of gastric symptoms, with no amelioration of the same under appropriate medication and dietetics.—Goodman; Arch. Diag.
