Ether—Practical Administration. No. 8.

Preparatory to placing the inhaler over the nose, a little petrolatum is smeared over the lips, nose, and adjacent skin surface. Over the eyes are placed several thicknesses of gauze and over this an end of the folded towel, the gauze protecting from the vapor and the towel being an effective barrier to the liquid itself. Personally I prefer to place the inhaler immediately on the face, though in some cases it may be desirable to start with it several inches above and gradually lower it.—Dr. J. B. Bogan; N. Y. Med. Journ.
