May 4, 1907.

Dr. W. D. Mercer, McCornellsville, Ohio, says:

"I used the sample of Pepto-Mangan (Gude) for a young lady who had La Grippe, resulting in uterine congestion with suppression of flow. She was in poor health at the time, anemia, bad color, etc. After the first four or five days, when fever had subsided, I put her upon Pepto-Mangan (Gude), teaspoonful, t. i. d., with the result that she entirely recovered her former health; flow returned. Her strength, appetite and color in face and lips came with the tonic—all that I could ask for."
