Syphilo-Dermo-Urologic Aphorisms.

The iritis which occurs in the course of syphilis is, as a rule, of that variety known as plastic. This form is one that is also seen, in some cases, as an accompaniment of interstitial keratitis, in congenital syphilis. An uncommon form of syphilitic iritis is that observed in late secondary or in tertiary lues. In this form there exist yellowish-red nodules near the pupillary and ciliary borders of the iris, but not in the intermediate zone. The circumcorneal injection of blood-vessels will also be noted.—Amer. Journ. of Derm.
