Typhoid-Differential Diagnosis—No. 6.

Epidemic influenza.—In this disease the temperature is usually not so long continued; there are no rose spots, a negative Widal, and the Pfeiffer bacillus is ordinarily present in the blood.

Uremia.—This is characterized by the absence of rose spots, and the Widal reaction. The urine shows diseased kidneys. The condition of the heart and arteries, and the previous history are suggestive.

Severe cases of trichiniasis.—The patient gives a history of having eaten salted or raw pork. There is edema of the eyelids, swelling and pain of the muscles, dyspnea and eosinophilia. A piece of the deltoid muscle for the examination for trichinae should be obtained.—Rueck; Med. Record.
