

We walked around the gully and had a look at our alike and oats the former is a splendid crop and the latter is pretty good considering when they were put in. We got back about four and did a few things around and then Daddy and Enah went over to the Mr. Persons to see if Emery could come and fix up the stable. Dick and Gerdie shot all the shells they had away but never got any thing. They saw an owl one that Daddy and I nearly stepped on over in the clouds. She also found a hen's nest in the orchard with fourteen eggs in it and an old hen sitting on them. They were all good. I fixed my toe up which was pretty sore and went bare foot till Enah came and got me a clean pair of socks.

After tea Dick and Gerdie went down town and I read a story in the strainer.

It has been very much cooler to-day with a wind from the east. Some prophesy rain.

Sunday June 25th
Walked down to Sunday School and Emery and Dick rode his wheel. Paddy and Enah were coming down but Dye came after Paddy to see his colt and so neither of them came down.

Daddy worked with the colt all day but says there is very little hope for him.

It rained a little right after dinner but Dick rode down to see the oddfellow's parade to the cemetery. I wrote a letter to Aunt and then walked down town. I went over to the park and found Punk, Wiser, Stuff and others at the gate. They told me it would cost a nickel to get in but I thought they were fooling and walked in without much trouble. I afterwards found when two or three fellows came and paid for admittance that Punk was getting all he could make there to-day. He has got the job of gate keeper for Buck all summer. Wiser and I went up town
