

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1870.

Bro. Furgeson & I started for the Square Station this morning as soon as we could get ready. His sister Belle went with us. I left them at the Station from whence they went to Hamilton and I went back to Springers. Spent the afternoon there and to night went with Frank & his two sisters to a social at the first Wick house on the mountain west of this place. There was a big burn out and the social netted something like forty six dollars. Got home about twelve.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1870.

This morning as soon as convenient I started for home from Springers. Kept there all night. Drove over to Hamilton and made a call at Dr. Furgeson's. I have formed a very favourable opinion of Mrs. Dr. & I received there my companion brother George & and we made tracks for home together.

We took dinner at Caledonia and fed our horse. Arrived home just as the sun was setting. It covered a good deal, while en the way, about machines and matter, and I, for my part, felt myself rather gratified by the conversation.
