Diagnosis of Arteriosclerosis.

L. F. Bishop is willing to diagnosticate arteriosclerosis whenever a person is found suffering, in the absence of any detectable local disease, from general deterioration of health, increasing cardiac discomfort on exertion, slight albuminuria, irregularities of blood pressure, and the persistent presence of indican in the urine. The diagnosis is confirmed by a history of abuse of protein foods, an attack of one of the predisposing diseases, or great nervous strain.—Archives of Diagnosis.
