Rachitic Conditions.

Fasano reports on the results obtained in the treatment of a trial of ten cases of rachitis with Pepto-Mangan (Gude). Five were cases of medium severity, while three were quite severe, having already developed cranio-tabes. The results were excellent. In those of medium severity nothing else was employed, save an invigorating diet. The effect was a keener appetite, improved nutrition, and the production of better blood, and as these appeared the pathological conditions retrograded.—Archivo Internazionale.
