

January Tuesday 4 1927

Alex took the milk in my place and got home at two o'clock. Drove the boys to school in the cutter when I had Dollie hooked in it for the first time. Got her shad while I was shopping and getting information about "marriage licenses". Called around by Taylor's for lumber on way home. Worked in dairy in afternoon and my thoughts all day were about when I would be two months from today.

Wednesday 5

Roscoe took the boys to school with the team when he went after a load of coal so I helped Andy with the plows. Drove out two loads of manure when we got the coal off. Busy afternoon in dairy. Called Jean at night about this but she was upstairs. Finished reading Jean's diary. It is certainly a wonderful book.

Thursday 6

A cold frosty windy day. Did some shopping when I drove the boys to school. Got a shave and hair cut and had a chat with Jean at noon. Took Jean with me when Roscoe and I drove to Clara Huch's party. Didn't dance on account of my feet but had a nice chat with Jean while we listened to the music. Drove home and she had we hated to part.

January Friday 7 1927

Woke in pretty good time even if it was 3:30 when I rolled on to the hay. Took the boys to school and after fixing up horses helped Roscoe draw out manure. Mr. Francis, P.O.P. cow tester came the night before and will be here till Sat morning. All day long a song "When the One that You Love, Loves You" kept rushing to my mind.

Saturday 8

Didn't have to take the boys to school so did up the chores across the road after breakfast, hooked up the "Greys" and we took out two loads of manure before our mid-day meal. Wash day in the dairy made it a busy one for me. A dandy clear bright winter day made it one day closer to March the third.

Sunday 9

A dandy bright frosty day. Did chores all morning and got fire on and things in good shape in the dairy. Roscoe helped me wash up right after dinner and then we drove up to Egham and helped Jean milk and then took her up home for tea. Had a very nice time and left for home early. Stopped at Bankers for a while and had a pleasant chat with Jean while we were sitting in the big chair together.
