18 DAYS PAST

347 TO COME

Maxillary Sinus Suppuration.

When pus is found in the antrum it can be accounted for in one of four ways:

1. It may be due to an extension of infectious material through the ostium from the middle meatus.

2. It may be due to infection reaching the cavity from the root of a diseased tooth.

3. It may be a secondary infection of a non-purulent accumulation of fluid.

4. The antrum may be acting as a drip cup for the discharge from diseased areas higher up in the nose.—A. H. Andrews; Detroit Med. Journ.

Weather Fair

Temp. Cold

Eugene went to dryer with the coll. Stopped to Mrs Thorup's on his way back & had his dinner. Boyde went with him. This afternoon Eugene went over and got Alice. They stayed for supper, then went to the Baptist Church, in the evening.

Media went $\frac{5}{6}$ miles.
