

of the way was mostly through orange groves, then we struck a rough, hilly part with the highway curving around the hills. and after leaving Perris we came to some olive groves. trees planted between big rocks, and the trees looked fine & healthy. I even tried an olive, some folks to play here as they are so bitter. We took a couple of snaps then drove on to Escondido and down to Escondido Lake where we had our lunch. The weather is cloudy yet, but tried a couple of more pictures there, then we left Escondido by another way home by

Corona. after leaving the Lake. we saw a lot of orchards. looked like Plums, prunes, and some peaches and walnuts. then another very rough & hilly country saw a brick yard there the first I have seen or heard of in Calif. then before we got into Corona (about 5 miles) was nothing but orange & lemon groves both sides of the road. the finest you ever saw. Corona was quiet at nice little town just after driving through we came to a nice park, where we took a couple of pictures were the kids. (both big & little) rode on a teeter (also
