boys. They first dump the oranges into a vat full of water where they are caught on carriers with little brushes on which scrub the oranges clean then these carriers takes them around hot-air pipes which dry them and then takes them out on a grading carrier with holes in it and the smallest ones keep dropping through and the farther they go the larger they get then the boys stand on each sieve and wrap them all in different paper according to size.

Tuesday, Jan 3rd. Harry and I walked out to see a turpentine plant that chopped old wood up and boiled the turpentine out. They were not running as they had broken their machinery. We then went through the artificial ice plant which was near. In the afternoon we saw them play a game of Polo.

Wednesday Jan 4th Harry and I went to see a Palmetto Factory where they dry and dye palmetto leaves for decorations they also make cheap fans out of them
