Diagnostic "Mays and Musts"—No. 3.

Eyelid dropsy is peculiar to nephritis, especially to the epithelial types, though we usually see the statement that it indicates granular nephritis (it does in some cases). At first it is noted only in the morning, and then becomes more or less permanent. The edema of the nephritides seeks first the loose connectiv tissues, while that of the organic heart lesions is more likely to be influenced by gravity, and thus seeks the ankles.—Williams; Med. World.
