 Hubby & Lela come over this morning and this after noon they burned the grass off the back field next the woods It looks as if there would be good pasture there soon Last night when I came home from town I went to look at the brooder and found that the temper there had gone down to forty on account of the window being left out. and this morning there were nine dead chickens in the brooder and five have died since. Chris. told me yesterday that lake sand would kill them so we got some yellow sand and covered up the lake sand which was in the pen. The white one had a pair of twins this morning but won't own one of them so has to be caught every now and then to give the land a chance to suck Lovely spring day with a south westerly breeze and not flying This. Forme Myers was in to night and got Dad's hen canary which he has been wanting to get rid of for quite awhile.

Friday April 9th

Dad & I got back fairly early this morning and Dad sowed about four bushels more seed while I harrowed the hill I crossed it which necessitated marching up and down hill all morning I didn't mind it much but I guess it was pretty hard on the horses. This afternoon I disked what Dad sowed this morning and he harrowed with Joe & Ginger. We got all the seed pretty well covered when it began to rain and is still keeping it up. We took the little team back in the shape of a four horse team with them as the leader but Joe was no good for a leader as she lagged. Lela came over this after noon and is staying all night. It has been fine and very mild all day and this is a warm rain which was needed for the wheat & hay badly.

Saturday April 10th

We didn't get started so early this morning as we didn't know whether it had rained enough to make things too wet or not, however we found it hadn't rained much so Dad went back to finish plowing the little piece on top of the hill which was left over from last fall. He finished it about three o'clock in some spots it was very wet & sticky and other places the frost isn't out yet but it is pretty good. He intended to sow it as soon as he got done and marks it in but when I went back at three o'clock the wind was so strong and it looked so rainy that we both came up and Dad drove Enah & Fidimus down town to get the mail.
 I took some eggs over to Macton's this morning and took
