Ether—Practical Administration. No. 3.

The prophylactic hypodermic injection of atropine and of morphine or codeine, is generally an assistance though not routinely used in our cases. The injection should be given a half or one hour before, and the dose of the hypnotic need not be large. The latter seems to be of special value in those cases which will awaken to experience new found pain.—Dr. J. B. Bogan; N. Y. Med. Journ.
