277 TO COME

The Eye in Diagnosis—(Concluded).

The eye itself, on the other hand, is responsible for numerous other symptoms located remote from its anatomic situation, such as errors of refraction, causing severe headache, migraine and backward children.

Heterophoria or disturbance of the muscular balance sometimes produces symptoms of neurasthenia in otherwise healthy adults.

Poisons not infrequently cause optic atrophy; among the more common may be classified alcohol, tobacco, iodoform, arsenic, lead and shellac.—Russell; Diet & Hyg. Gazette.
