

Sunday, October 22nd

All except Dick went down to church this morning. Frank and I went down first to Sunday school or what was meant to be Sunday school but was really just a practice for Children's day, which is to be held again in two weeks at the reopening of the church. It was sprinkling when we got out of church and was raining hard by the time we got home. Frank wanted to go and see Mr. Fay about his hens but I persuaded him not to, on account of the rain. It rained till about two or three o'clock and began to blow like fun and is yet. I wrote a letter about the first thing after dinner, then went in the parlor where the rest of the family were gathered and enjoyed some music. About four o'clock I went out and froled around and went back after the cows. Frank and I went down after five to post my letter. The creek was so high that Frank thought he would go down to the dock. The waves were not extra high but he was delighted with them. We got home soon after dark. The lady went down to church to night. Dick is still feeling like but is better.

It is our season to try to keep for some big company but this
 It has been very windy to day and dark and cloudy for the better part of the day.

Saturday October 23rd

I woke up myself this morning and got up before Dad. Frank also got up early and stubbed his toe which has been very sore all day. Daddy went over to Blake's first thing this morning and sacked up a lot of oats. I got some wood of different kinds for a collection and also out a little. Dad got back about 10.30 and we looked up to the wagon and went over and got the oats. Daddy also helped Blake with his pig. for quite awhile. We got back quite a bit after noon. Mrs. Uye was over for awhile after dinner. Daddy and I went after dinner down to the mill with the wheat we had sacked up and got some bran. Dad went home and got a wagon load of rails and I took Mr. Uye's bag back to him. Mrs. Holden came over when we came up to the house with the rails and took the apples down and also paid Dad $2 for the same. I went back after the cows to night and just about got drowned with rain coming fast and also hailed and was colder than ^{hell}. Stan was in to night before tea and says they are getting on fine down there. He is up on a little
