296 TO COME

The Anesthetist.

An expert anesthetist is quick to note every change, and can so "nurse" his patient that it is seldom he has any anxiety from the appearance of untoward symptoms. These difficulties may turn up in the hands of the less experienced, who must at times give an anesthetic, and who must, therefore, get the most thorough training possible. No man can have confidence in his power to administer an anesthetic safely who has not a very clear idea as to what constitutes a danger signal and a definite knowledge of how to proceed instantly and without hesitation to get his patient into a safer condition.—W. Rankin; The Practitioner.

Weather

Temp.

Muddy & snowed this afternoon. John was down to Ted Thompsons this fore noon. And has gone over to see how Mr Boy is. The Dr was there this afternoon & was in here
Mr Boy has an abscess.
The girls & I have started a rag mat for Melba, Maude's and the flowers on it
