17 TO COME

Attending Physician's Opinions.

Attending physicians, of skill and good repute, who are not experts in mental diseases, may, it is held, testify as to the mental condition of their patients, and their opinions as to such condition are admissible, when the facts upon which they base their opinions are detailed to the jury, although they may not give opinions as to the direct question to be determined.—In re Whiting, Maine Supreme Court, 85 Alt. 791.

Weather

Very cold this Temp.

morning. But turned warmer through the day, & snowing to night very hard. Mella & I went to church then this afternoon I took Evelin & Mella to Sunday school. Evelin stayed for supper. An boy was over this afternoon. Grandie was not feeling well & never went out. I got my new Henson Book.
