

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1870.

This morning as soon as possible my friend and I left ~~our~~ Thompsons for Hamilton. I left him there, at Dr. Furgerson's and went on to Melrose. I got there in time for dinner. I spent the afternoon pleasantly talking with these kind friends. I felt myself highly favored in the privilege of conversing with B. although not so private as I could have wished. I was glad to see her looking so well. Frank was home and we had an old-fashioned chat together.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1870.

This morning about nine I started for the Square where I promised to meet Rev. George Furgerson and take him up to Milton. We had a prosperous journey and arrived at our destination about two o'clock. We found excellent sleighing most of the way for which we were happily prepared. I left the buggy at Springers and took their cutter. I was quite pleased with George's father and sisters. They are certainly a very interesting family. I spent the evening very pleasantly.
