

Saturday

Thursday, February 1

32 DAYS PAST

334 TO COME

Syphilo-Dermo-Urologic Aphorisms.

Theoretically, the detection of stone in the bladder is a comparatively easy manœuvre. Occasionally, the symptoms described by the patient point to vesical calculus and, despite all efforts, it cannot be detected by the sound. This may be occasioned by the fact that the stone has lodged behind the prostate. By tilting the hips well up above the level of the shoulders the calculus may become dislodged, roll down to the base of the bladder, and then be easily found.—Amer. Journ. of Derm.

Weather

Temp.

Fine but cold. Pa went to town and got Mike shod. Eugene and Aleta were here for dinner about 4 o'clock. Baby stayed while they went to town. Grace invited me to come out and stay till Sunday. Alma and Clarke brought Maud in some candies, then went on to town.