

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1870.

Henry and Will have been helping Lisdale & day. Charley has been helping him since afternoon so.

The weather is still very fine and favorable for our harvest work.

Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers is a divine injunction & they who transgress the laws of God are almost sure to reap the consequences. Solomon saw of the excess of men since in this respect, and only see the terrible fall that followed it, and were now their <sup>own</sup> examples.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1870.

We had another rain last night a lot to do. So that our harvest operations are suspended for the present. I sent Will & mill with a quart of wheat to day. We have been fixing the road through the woods to day, besides some other little jobs.

The thought came to night. How pleasant must be the life of the man of justice. Of course this is a suggestion of Satan. Then followed a counter suggestion which made my heart leap with joy. It is much more substantial and real the happiness of the man who gives to God.
