Gynecological Hints.

As soon as a patient has been put to bed after a laparotomy an enema of one pint of hot water (110° F.) containing one ounce of whiskey should be administered. This hastens reaction and prevents the severe thirst that is so apt to follow laparotomies. Hot saline is not absorbed as rapidly as hot sterile water and so should not be used.—Waldo; Int. Journ. of Surg.

Weather

Temp.

Warm in the afternoon
then along about five
turned quite chilly,
Maude & I were out to Aplua in the forenoon,
then after dinner Maude &
