Strangulated Hernia.

Most cases of strangulated hernia give positive evidence of intestinal obstruction, besides the local sign of an unreducible hernia, but strangulation may exist without marked signs of obstruction, as for instance, we may have a large mass of omentum incarcerated, with shock, vomiting and the local signs present, and yet the bowels continue to move, until a peritonitis produces the obstruction and death.—F. Flaherty, N. Y. State Journal of Medicine.
