Care of Milk.

When milk has once been boiled it needs to be carefully protected from contamination, especially by flies or dust, because when once the lactic acid bacteria have been destroyed by boiling, putrefaction and other bacteria gaining access to milk have unrestrained opportunities of multiplication, and such milk is apt to putrefy and acquire dangerous properties without showing signs of souring. The absolute cleanliness of every vessel used for "boiled milk" is a sine qua non if danger is to be averted.—Dr. J. T. Nash; The Lancet.

Weather

fair & fine

Temp.

The girls drove & got the horse shod. I went down to Mrs Clarence Skinner's this afternoon, & called on Mrs Davey on my way, & have Eugene went to Sparta to meet Carl with a cow that he bought at Mitch Hepburn's. Midland Powers was here on his road to Kingmill, road horse. Buck got tired of the road, put the horse in the barn & went up on foot. The Dave Adams car came in tonight.
