257 TO COME

Easily Evident.

The "iron need," in Chlorosis, is unquestionable and is readily noted, by the practiced eye, in the peculiar pallor of the skin and mucous membranes. Such an "iron need" is best supplied in the form of a palatable, tolerable, non-irritant, easily assimilable compound, i.e., Pepto-Mangan (Gude). This organic combination of iron and manganese meets every indication without injuring the digestion or inducing a constipated habit.
