

noon, but Frank stays back there to set some traps for a coon he thought he saw tracks of the other day, he isn't sure whether it is a coon or a ground hog. This afternoon he went back and worked all after noon on the side hill, while Dad and I cleaned up muck out. Ernie went down to choir practice to night. Lovely day.

Saturday May 6th

Dad got started down pretty early and worked all day in the garden down home fixing the paths all up the way they used to be. He had to cut the sod right off so it was a tedious job, but I went down to night and they are all just ticked to death at the change in the looks of things. He took the baby down with him. Frank worked all day on the lands and says he got on fairly well. I worked around the garden all day and did chores. At noon when we were at dinner we heard a cow bawl and on looking out saw they had knocked down the Lang ab and were all back the lane. We tried to lead them off but couldn't so let them go. Jim went back too although Dad wanted to put her in the orchard instead of back there as he was afraid she wouldn't be able to navigate the hills but she managed pretty well. The day rained a few times but I went down to night and got my new suit.

Sunday May 7th

We all went down to church this morning. Dad and the baby sat up in the front seat and the baby surprised all past records for good behavior. After church I walked down to the Customs office with Hubby and he was explaining the great amount of complicated work he had to do and saying how much he liked it. He is just as interested down there as he used to be over here digging post holes or shovelling manure, he thinks his office is dandy with the view to get from both windows of the lake and the marsh right outside full of all kinds of birds and he has every thing inside just as neat and slick as a button. We moped around down there so long that I was afraid Auntie would have started dinner without me so I went up to dinner with Hubby. Oda was up there but Jimmie had come over here. This afternoon Mayie and I started to walk around the hills but it was such a beautiful day and so hot that I with a little coaxing persuaded her to come out here till I hooked her up and we went for a drive. Dad had just got through cleaning his probang and his hands were all dirty so he hooked up for us. The old
