

Monday March 22nd

Frank has been down at Prestons all day trimming up the dead limbs. He also went over to Henry Meiners to see when they wanted to cut wood but Henry was not home. Dad and I moved the bulls into the place where the sters were, where we can keep them clean. We took down the calf stanchions and cleaned out the cubes box stall. So night Frank and I went down to the annual meeting of the J. F. S. A. and there were just enough boys to form a quorum. Clarence Frisch suggested that we dissolve the thing and use what money we had about $25.00 to buy some good agricultural books to put in the Library. Every one agreed to the proposal except Charlie Blake who didn't want to dissolve, however the motion carried. We were all surprised to day by Frank and me receiving forty dollars from ^{Apple} Granddaddy from the sale of some property out there. It came just in time for me to get a new suit. The Northern Lights were wonderful to night. Beautiful day.

Tuesday March 23rd

Frank gathered up all the saws he could find this morning and took them down to Dave Waddles to sharpen them. Dave saw him the other night and invited him down so he was here to dinner. I went over to Prestons and took the dead wood out of the two trees that were left. This afternoon I drove out to Shands and bargained for a couple of loads of hay, which we are to get as soon as we can manage it. I went from there down to the cheese factory and got some butter as no one is hauling yet in Louis (place). The roads are very heavy although not deep and in some places quite dry, it was after six when I got home. I brought Cliff down up from the factory with me. I went down town to night and spent the evening with Mary. Fine day.

Wednesday March 24th

I went down town first thing this morning and went to Lips and tried on some ready-made suits. I picked on one $42.00 Navy Blue that suited me pretty well, but I told Harry I wouldn't decide till I went to town etc. I went up on the eleven o'clock car and went to see Neff about the books the J. F. S. A. want to donate to the Library. I then went over to Inscrable & Vance and they showed me a piece of Navy Blue Irish serge they called it, which the fellow said they had cut a great many suits of and he said he would guarantee it to be fast dye and all wool so I ordered a suit of it at $5.00. It seemed pretty steep but I thought the guarantee was worth something. I came home on the express car and went up to tell Cal Smith who is Chairman of the Library Board about the books, and so it was about five o'clock when I got home. I found Frank was away as Edmond England had sent for him to help cut wood just after I left. So night he
