

Tuesday 24th October.

Beautiful day. Dad plowed all day and I plowed around. Frank's toe was so sore he could not go to school to day but stayed home and wrote letters, and ate spokies that Enah was making.

I fooled around and did chores and saw that. This afternoon I picked apples. Dick went to school to day.

We all quit early so as to get a good start to the station to meet Aunt & Win. The cows came up of their own accord to celebrate the occasion. Frank drove down with Daddy & Edna on account of his sore toe and Dick and I went on foot. We left at the same time but Dick & I beat. We waited till about half past nine for the train. Cousin Clara and ~~Frank~~ were on with Aunt. We went up to Aunt's where Aunt is to stay for a day or so and stayed till about ~~seven~~ <sup>ten</sup> o'clock.

Wednesday October 25th

It looked very rainy this morning and Dad was going to haul in the corn but he thought he would plow till noon. I cleaned up a little around the dairy yard. Frank did not go to school to day either. This afternoon Dad just went out to finish a land that he had stuck out very crookedly before any one went along the road. I went out with him and opened up a ditch. When I came back and hummed around with Frank, for Enah had gone down town to see Aunt and get some presents for Yela. She said she would be home at half past four and did pretty well by being home a little before six and with new alogia at that.

Dad came up about three o'clock and we went back and got a load of corn but did not have time to unload it and had to leave some in the field. I spent most of the evening in writing this thing which I think I have kept about long enough now that Aunt is home.

Then Enah got think she was funny and spang about a dipper full of water on me and threw my diary on purpose. and what the ree
