

Thursday June 22nd His Majesty King George V was crowned to-day and the school and all business places had a holiday, but Dick stayed home and drew all day.

Bill plowed all day, Daddy and I went back and cultivated corn till ten o' clock Joe went a good deal better.

Then I went over and spread manure till noon as Bill had caught up in the plowing. Nye came over and he and Daddy put the rake to-gether. I got quite a nice bunch of straw berries over in our patch.

After dinner I had a pretty good rest and then went back and ches potatoes till about 4.30 p.m. I slaughtered a great number of potato bugs. They are chewing the plants all to pieces. I went bare footed with one foot for a while my toe was so sore.

Daddy spread manure till Sam Law came to after him to see his cow which he thought was sick. Then he came and told me I could go for a swim and then went and rolled what Bill had plowed and Bill spread manure.

Dick and I went down to the stump and had a dandy swim. The first I have had for nearly two weeks. <sup>(Dirt)</sup> Tony Bonnister came over in a scow and it sunk before he got over, but he was prepared.

Dick churned after tea and got so much butter that the butter bowls would hardly hold it.

It has been and is now hot enough to cook eggs to-day in spite of a nice westerly breeze.
