Diagnostic Aphorisms in Gynecology—No. 4.

If a swelling is unilateral the probabilities are against tubo-ovarian inflammation; if it is bilateral, the probabilities are against tubal pregnancy.

It is well not to assume too readily that there is a tumor only on one side merely because none can be felt on the other.

When a small, firm tumor can be felt on the left side, it is well to make a rectal examination. Such a tumor may be a carcinoma of the rectum or of the sigmoid.—Giles.
