

Pete. I fully intended going home to night at six o'clock but as Jeff was not nearly through I didn't like to leave him. We were out there till after ten to night and the were not through. This was the anniversary of the signing of the armistice and it was supposed to be observed throughout the whole Empire by every one stopping work at eleven o'clock for two minutes, this was the King's request. We stopped work out at the Exhibition and then sang "God save the King" and I guess the same thing was done all over. To night there was a reunion and banquet for some battalions at the Curb. Pete and we got in for all the racket they made. There was an open air dance and general celebration up on University Ave. to night and there were a couple of aeroplanes flying around illuminated. We went up to University Ave on our way home to night but the dance was over with.

Wednesday November 12th

I didn't get up very early this morning and went down town till noon to get some things. I hurried through lunch at Ray's intending to leave for home at 1:20 but I didn't give myself time enough to get to the station and missed my train by about two minutes. I had a shave and hair cut and went back up to Ray's for about an hour and left on the 4 o'clock train, it was a slow one and I didn't get to Brantford till nearly seven so didn't get to Dover till nine. I went up to Auntie's for a minute or two and then up town to see Mrs. Coldwell.

Thursday November 13th

Charlie Quamby was through here before day light and before anyone but Dad was up on his way to light a fire in the engine and he wanted one of us to go over and help him thrash his oats. I went over about nine o'clock and we finished about 10:30. When I got back I helped Dad throw out some ditches in the corner field till noon and Frank plowed in there all day. Dad finished the other field while I was away. This afternoon Dad & I went down to Auntie's to bank up the house. I cleaned out the cow stable and spent most of the afternoon cleaning out one end of the chicken shed and putting in fresh straw. It froze very hard last night and has been very cloudy and freezing quite hard all day.
