Practical Points in Infant Feeding—No. 2.

Habitual colic is nearly always from an excess of proteins. For such a condition one should not give more than one-third as much proteins as fat, and usually at first very low percentages. This condition is usually associated with the presence of curds in the stools, which requires the same treatment.—

Weather

Temp.

Very cold & rough roads a few snow flurries. John took Mellars went for her, Maudie was down to Mrs Dan Wagners for dinner. Then to night!
Maudie Mellars I was over to Mr Loves. Mr Boy came over & stayed with John. I was home all day.
