Alcohol Antidote.

Ammonium chloride is recommended as an antidote to alcohol, given in doses of 30 to 60 grains, with copious draughts of water to prevent gastro-intestinal irritation. It prevents the effects of the alcohol, sobers the patients quickly, and is a valuable preventative against delirium tremens. Should the patient not become quiet after taking the remedy, bromide or chloral hydrate may be administered.—Med. Times.

I took the girls to school & went for them. John & Eugene went about eleven o'clock down to Percy Dennis's sale, came home about six. I got some paper for the kitchen. Evelyn was over. It has kept misting all the afternoon. Mrs Gilman Morris was buried today. Adams came up this morning to get Eugene to help milk his kicking cow. Healing this night & much colder Bill went to town.
